

Michael's project is looking to expand an existing module on Healthcare Law & Ethics. The students currently undertake online seminars using discussion boards - this makes the module more flexible for the students and prevents sensitive issues from 'flaming' in a classroom environment. The project will expand the cohort to include students from disciplines outside of law, such as nursing, social work, philosophy etc to broaden the debate. Also, students from international institutions will participate to extend the scope of both the legal and ethical dilemmas. A variety of methods of assessment will also be defined and described to accompany the 'virtual exchange'.
